- How long will it take to complete the project?

Final design of the flood protection system will take approximately two years. Acquisition of properties will take another two years, following which construction will begin. Construction is expected to take three years.

- What steps must be taken in order for this project to be given the go-ahead?

The feasibility study of the flood protection system must be given final approval by the Corps of Engineers. The study will then be presented at public meetings which the Corps will hold in the Bloomsburg area. Following those public meetings, Bloomsburg Town Council must decide if it is in the Town's best interests to proceed with this project.
